

Building new relationships and improving knowledge and skills...

Hear from one of our incredible learners from JTM Plumbing who has experienced the journey firsthand.

My Apprenticeship Journey

Declan, who has completed his Supply Chain Warehouse Operative apprenticeship at JTM Plumbing, has found that his programme has had a positive impact on his skills and knowledge.

Having chosen an apprenticeship to gain additional qualifications, Declan's experience has been really positive and has massively helped him build his communication skills and learn a lot of new things. He found meeting deadlines for coursework to be a challenge during his apprenticeship, but with his newfound skills and the support of his Vocational Skills Coach, Liam, he overcame this obstacle as he progressed through the programme.

Declan has grown academically and personally during his learning journey. Meeting new people and building relationships have been some of the highlights of his programme and have both supported him in improving both his knowledge and skills.

Throughout his apprenticeship, Declan has learned and developed key skills and behaviours including effective communication, customer service, and the use of new technologies for tasks such as order processing, quality checks, and picking and packing.

Declan has also broadened his knowledge in health and safety laws, safe equipment use and familiarity with new systems and processes. These have all translated into benefits for his job role too, improving communication, introducing different processes, enhancing time management, and boosting attendance – all contributing to the development of employability skills and an improved CV for Declan!
