

Skills Bootcamps in Digital

Skills Bootcamps are a high profile Government initiative and part of the Government's Plan for Jobs, focused on protecting, supporting and creating jobs across the country.

Where employers like you come in

Employers play a part in designing the curriculum. This could be through site visits, sharing aspects of the induction programme and/or employee case studies with us. We would locate our delivery on or close to your operations, in your premises, or at a nearby venue and will manage the learner journey and transition into employment from start to finish.

How we work

The key purpose of Skills Bootcamps is to connect Employers who have skills gaps and difficulty recruiting with unemployed people or people looking to retrain. We work with employers to get a real sense of what their requirements are, what type of person would be suitable, and the specific skills individuals need to enter employment.

What's in it for you?

- Solve your recruitment challenges.
- Design training based on the skills required for the job.
- Get people into work quick - maximum 12-week programme.
- Support and prepare prospective employees and undertake interviews.
- Support new employees to settle into work.
- Once employees are in place, we can refer to further training opportunities local providers.
